Islington Education Library Service

How would you like to borrow a rainforest puppet, an original baby's gas mask, a Victorian tin bath, or an original WWII newspaper?

- The Islington Education Library Service is a modern day cabinet of curiosities of over 35,000 objects acquired over a period of 20 years to create an inspirational handling collection for schools.
- We can support all aspects of curricular and creative projects. We promote object handling as a form of active learning that inspires pupils.
- We provide value for money delivering a range of resources that a school or teacher would not be able to source, afford and maintain.
- All artefacts have been carefully collected by us. We believe they resonate with children, provoking questions and helping us all empathise with others in many times and places. They can fill classrooms with wonder and joy.

'The children are so excited when your boxes arrive. There is a rush to open them and explore the contents'
